About the Organizers

HPA-China is a non-profit trade organization representing both International and Chinese dietary supplement, contract manufacturers, nutritional ingredient suppliers and natural product service providers. The association focuses on China's overall natural health product industry offering consulting, regulatory services, industry media, conferences, match making, sourcing, product approvals, trade mark assistance, cross border e-commerce solutions, marketing / advertising and much more.

The association is committed to increasing the trade and availability of its member's products and services, which will benefit the health and wellbeing of both industry and consumers alike. Visit their website HERE.

The International Probiotics Association (IPA) is an international organization with members equally divided between industry and academia and its goal is to provide a unique forum for the exchange of research and the latest breakthroughs in probiotic technology and new product development. IPA holds NGO status before Codex Alimentarius and is the global voice of probiotics as the majority of the world's industrial producers are members. Visit their website HERE.

FoodMate is a Chinese company and is well known in China's food industry. They have a database of over 4 million, 39 different WeChat channels as well as provide many business services including B2B e-marketplace for both buyers and suppliers, free and premium solutions both online / offline, trade show promoting, magazine marketing, advertising and sourcing assistance.
